

Bricks of Wheat

By Cooper Alvin

As I come home from school, filled with resent,
I see cold cream of wheat, hard as cement!
I thought what could be built with such hard a material,
Build skyscrapers out of this rock-hard cold cereal.
A new way of building! Who would of thought evolution
Could lead to such a disgusting solution.

Cream of wheat bricks! Now that's something new!
Guess the trick to construction is edible goo!
Someone says: "The tallest building is inside Dubai."
"That's nothing! Build it with soup!" I reply.
We'd build it high and we'd build it wide.
Why would we do it? 'Cause nobody's tried.

A cream of wheat pool? No, that'd be just gross.
A cream of wheat coaster? (sigh) That'd be shunned on by most.
A cream of wheat car? Something no one would borrow.
Well, I'm out of ideas! Come back tomorrow!
